

107TH CONGRESS
2^D SESSION

S. 2559

To expand research for women in trauma.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

MAY 23, 2002

Mr. EDWARDS (for himself and Mrs. MURRAY) introduced the following bill; which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions

A BILL

To expand research for women in trauma.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4 This Act may be cited as the “Expanding Research
5 for Women in Trauma Act of 2002”.

6 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

7 Congress finds the following:

8 (1) Most studies of violence against women cur-
9 rently focus on physical abuse or rape, primarily be-10 cause they are easier to identify and measure and 11 are potentially lethal, however, almost all battered

1 women describe psychological abuse as the most 2 harmful.

3 (2) Much of the research on violence against
4 women has not focused on nontraditional popu-
5 lations, although available data shows that incarcer-
6 ated women, women living in poverty, women belong-
7 ing to minority ethnic and language groups, older
8 women, and women with mental and physical dis-
9 abilities report especially high rates of victimization.

10 (3) Victims of violence are at increased risk for 11 a number of physical and mental health problems, 12 for example, in primary care practice, women who 13 have been raped report more symptoms of illness
14 and more negative health behaviors than nonvictim-
15 ized women.

16 (4) Effective methods for screening to identify 17 women affected by violence are prerequisite to un-18 derstanding the outcomes of abuse-sensitive medical 19 care, for example, the effect of medical attention to 20 violence on perceived health utilization of health
21 services over time, and patient satisfaction.

22 (5) Violence against women occurs in a
23 sociocultural context. More research should be con-
24 ducted to identify sociocultural factors that promote 25 and maintain violence against women and to learn

1 how sociocultural factors, such as gender roles and 2 poverty, mediate the effects of interpersonal victim-
3 ization.

4 (6) There are a number of community-based 5 and legal system interventions available to victims of 6 interpersonal violence. However, there is little eval-
7 uation research on the effectiveness of these inter-
8 ventions, especially for various subpopulations of 9 women. More research needs to be conducted on the 10 effectiveness of legal and community-based interven-
11 tions, not only those with the goal of changing the 12 behavior of assailants but also those with the goal of 13 helping women take safety-promoting actions.

14 (7) Much of the research on violence against 15 women examines continuing rates of physical or psy-
16 chological abuse as outcome measures and measures
17 the behavior of the perpetrators, not something over 18 which the woman has direct and immediate control.
19 However, research on the women's attempts to man-
20 age and end the violence in their lives is rare.

21 (8) Much of the extant research has focused on 22 violence against women in the streets (sexual as-23 sault) or in their homes (domestic violence, bat-
24 tering, or marital rape). However, consistent focus

1 on violence against women in work-related and edu-
2 cational contexts has been more limited.

3 SEC. 3. RESEARCH INITIATIVES.

4 Part P of title III of the Public Health Service Act
5 (42 U.S.C. 280g et seq.) is amended by adding at the end
6 the following:

7 “SEC. 3990. VIOLENCE PREVENTION RESEARCH INITIA-

23 “(8) develop standardized questions concerning
24 rape, battering, and sexual harassment in work-re-
25 lated and educational contexts to be routinely in-

1 cluded in governmentally sponsored national surveys
