A BILL

To establish a National Foundation for the Study of Holocaust Assets.

1       Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2       tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3       SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4       This Act may be cited as the “Holocaust Victims’ As-5       sets, Restitution Policy, and Remembrance Act”.

6       SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

7       Congress makes the following findings:

8               (1) The United States should continue to lead
9       the international effort to identify, protect, and re-

1 turn looted assets taken by the Nazis and their col-
2 laborators from victims of the Holocaust.

3 (2) The citizens of the United States should un-
4 derstand exactly how the United States Government
5 dealt with the assets looted from victims of the 6 Nazis that came into its possession.

7 (3) The United States forces in Europe made
8 extraordinary efforts to locate and restitute assets
9 taken by the Nazis and their collaborators from vic-
10 tims of the Holocaust.

11 (4) However, the restitution policy formulated
12 by the United States and implemented in the coun-
13 tries in Europe occupied by the United States had 14 many inadequacies and fell short of realizing the 15 goal of returning stolen property to the victims.

16 (5) As a result of these United States policies
17 and their implementation, there remain today many 18 survivors or heirs of survivors who have not had re-
19 stored to them that which the Nazis looted.

20 (6) The Presidential Advisory Commission on 21 Holocaust Assets in the United States, established
22 in Public Law 105–186, found the following:

23 (A) Despite the undertaking by United
24 States agencies to preserve, protect, and return
25 looted assets, United States restitution policy

1           could never fully address the unimaginable di-
2           mension and complexity of restituting assets to 3           victims of the Holocaust. Many inadequacies re-
4           veal that United States authorities were driven
5           by necessity, and practical concerns of restitu-
6           tion commingled with conflicting interests, pri-
7           orities, and political considerations. Restitution
8           competed with, and was often subordinated to,
9           the desire to bring American troops home, the 10          need to rebuild devastated European economies,
11          and provide humanitarian assistance to millions
12          of displaced persons, and the Cold War.

13                 (B) With respect to many types of assets,
14          the United States followed international legal 15          tradition and undertook only to restore property
16          to national governments, which it assumed 17          would be responsible for satisfying the claims of 18          their citizens. Because this practice excluded
19          those who no longer had a nation to represent 20          their interests, or who had fallen victim to the 21          Nazi genocide, the United States also des-
22          ignated certain “successor organizations” to sell
23          heirless and unclaimed property and apply the 24          proceeds to the care, resettlement, and rehabili-
25          tation of surviving victims. This practice led

1 many assets to be too hastily labeled as heirless
2 or unidentifiable, with the result that they were 3 assigned to the successor organizations, rather 4 than returned to their rightful owners.

5 (C) Far more regrettable is the United 6 States failure to adequately assist victims,
7 heirs, and successor organizations to identify 8 victims' assets, instead relying upon them to 9 present their own claims, often within unreal-
10 istically short deadlines, with the result that 11 much victim property was never recovered.

12 (D) Even when property was returned to 13 individual owners or their heirs, it was often 14 only after protracted, cumbersome, and expen-
15 sive administrative proceedings that yielded set-16 tlements far less than the full value of the as-17 sets concerned.

18 (E) While the overall record of the United 19 States is one in which its citizens can legiti-
20 mately take pride, even the most farsighted and 21 best-intentioned policies intended to restitute
22 stolen property to its country of origin failed to 23 realize the goal of returning property to the vic-
24 tims who suffered the loss.

1           (F) In many instances, policy and cir-
2           cumstance combined and led to results that can 3           be improved upon now, to provide a modicum of 4           justice to Holocaust victims and their heirs and 5           in memory of those who did not survive.

6           (7) The United States Government should pro-
7           mote both the review of Holocaust-era assets in Fed-
8           eral, State, and private institutions, and the return
9           of such assets to victims or their heirs.

10          (8) The best way to achieve this is to create a
11          single institution to serve as a centralized repository
12          for research and information about Holocaust-era
13          assets.

14          (9) Enhancing these policies will also assist vic-
15          tims of future armed conflicts around the world.

16          (10) The Government of the United States has 17          worked to address the consequences of the National 18          Socialist era with other governments and nongovern-
19          mental organizations, including the Conference on 20          Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, which has 21          worked since 1951 with the Government of the 22          United States and with other governments to accom-
23          plish material restitution of the looted assets of Hol-
24          ocaust victims, wherever those assets were identified,
25          and has played a major role in allocating restitution

1 funds and funds contributed by the United States
2 and other donor countries to the Nazi Persecutee
3 Relief Fund.

4 SEC. 3. ESTABLISHMENT AND PURPOSES.
