RESOLUTION

Expressing sympathy to and pledging the support of the House of Representatives and the people of the United States for the victims of Cyclone Sidr in southern Bangladesh.

Whereas on November 15, 2007, Cyclone Sidr hit the coast of southern Bangladesh with 155 mile-an-hour winds that smashed tens of thousands of homes, damaged roads and buildings, and caused a 16-foot tidal surge that ruined thousands of hectares of crops;

Whereas early reports have branded the destruction from Cyclone Sidr as the worst in Bangladesh in 16 years;

Whereas the resulting damage from the cyclone is estimated to have affected 4,000,000 people so far through evacuation from and loss of their homes;

Whereas over half of the affected internally displaced population are children, an estimated 400,000 of whom are under the age of 5;

Whereas Bangladesh's Disaster Ministry now estimates that the homes of over 750,000 people were damaged or destroyed;

Whereas the death toll from the cyclone is already at 3,500 and continues to climb;

Whereas the Bangladesh Red Crescent has warned that the number of dead could ultimately be as high as 10,000;

Whereas as the 5 districts in southern Bangladesh that were most drastically affected by the cyclone are Patuakhali, Barguna, Bagerhat, Barisal, and Pirojpur;

Whereas hundreds of thousands of people in remote areas of Patuakhali and Barguna are currently cut off from relief operations, which has caused widespread starving and suffering from the lack of access to drinking water and medicines;

Whereas one relief worker commented that Bagerhat looked like a "valley of death" in the days after the storm;

Whereas an entire island in Barisal, another district of southern Bangladesh, was submerged under at least 6 feet of water and houses were blown away by winds;

Whereas in Pirojpur it is estimated that it will take at least 1 week to restore the power supply;

Whereas the capital, Dhaka, which is located over 130 miles away from the devastated southern coastline, was also impacted by storm, losing access to power and water for days;

Whereas a massive tidal wave that was caused by Cyclone Sidr hit the Sunderbans, the world's biggest mangrove forest that is home to the endangered Royal Bengal tiger, leaving a wake of death and destruction that have caused experts to declare the forest an "ecological disaster";

Whereas officials at the United Nations World Food Program have appealed for international aid to help save lives in Bangladesh, noting that food supplies have been severely disrupted by the cyclone and that there was risk of famine; and

Whereas, due to the limited access to water supply and sanitation facilities that millions of Bangladeshis will face, health officials have begun warning against the serious possibility of cholera, dysentery, and other waterborne diseases: Now, therefore, be it
